Talk: Manawātū coast under climate change & their impacts on native vegetation
Speaker: Jill Rapson, Research Associate, School of Natural Sciences, Massey University

Jill will talk about her theories on the future of the Manawatu coast and its major habitats, in the face of global warming and projected future sea levels. Using a mix of scenic illustrations and data from research studies, she will discuss the potential future of dune, wetland and estuarine vegetation. The coast could be very different in the future, and management needs to consider its long-term options.

All welcome. Gold coin donation appreciated
